Finance & Administration just wrapped up the four-year OneSource project at the University of Georgia. The project, whose aim was to transform the business processes at UGA, was a massive undertaking and required a great deal of hard work and cooperation from teams all over campus.

“Many details and tasks are required to work through a project of this size and scope,” said Ryan Nesbit, Vice President of Finance & Administration, at a recent OneSource event recognizing our accomplishments. “You also know that a few individuals cannot do this alone… it requires a team,” Nesbit said.

The OneSource project required collaboration and coordination of more than 1,000 partners, from central administration, to every school, college, unit and division on campus. In all, every employee at UGA has been impacted, as OneSource now includes all business processes with those of the University System. And, we have gone through this process before we started it in 2016,”

“We had heard horror stories from other institutions that had gone through this process before we started it in 2016,” Morehead said. “Because of your hard work and dedication, the University of Georgia has integrated, streamlined, and enhanced our business processes; we have improved our data collection and reporting capabilities; we have enhanced our data privacy and security; and we have standardized and aligned our business processes with those of the University System. And, we have done it on time and on budget,” Morehead said.

As a result of UGA’s successful OneSource accomplishments, we are now seen nationally as a model for implementation, now that we have gone “live” and the financial and human resources systems are fully integrated in the OneSource project, we are moving into the Operations phase of implementation. This means that we will continue to improve our processes and work through “pain points”. We are striving to improve reporting, provide timely communications, and eliminate administrative burden. We are dedicated to your success!

The work you have done up to now and will continue to do on the OneSource project will have a significantly positive impact on the University of Georgia for years to come,” said Morehead.
Transitioning the OneSource Project to Operations

Since July 2016, your offices, institution subject matter experts, along with consultants and USG staff, have partnered to facilitate the OneSource Project. This multi-year business process transformation has now transitioned from project implementation to regular operations and long-term optimization!

Reorganizations are often necessary as a result of business process transformation. HR and EITS have already made organizational changes to support our new systems. The Finance Division has merged staff from two offices into the new Commitment Management Team. We continue to evaluate additional organizational changes to enhance our service and support to the University community.

The Executive Sponsors will remain actively engaged for strategic guidance. The OneSource Leadership Team will also remain for operational oversight. We now have 3 co-directors for OneSource operations: Sharon Logan, EITS; Diane Kirkwood, HR; and Crystal Rogers, Finance.

What is currently happening at the garden?

We are very excited to make some critical updates in our greenhouse and we are installing 23 brand new shiny aluminum and expanded metal benches to replace 30 year old wooden tables. We are also installing a new irrigation system in our garden that will make watering more efficient during our long growing season.

Are there any new plants that are “must haves” for garden lovers?

We are trialing over 600 new plants for 2019 and a few of the must haves for coming years are going to be the Beacon Series Impatiens which will come in white, orange, purple, red and pink. Also Salvia Rockin ‘Blue Suede Shoes’ and Heliosipis ‘Bleeding Hearts’.

What is your most fragrant flower?

During the early summer it’s hard to beat the lilies. Right now we have a Lemon Eucalyptus that has simply wonderful fragrance in its leaves. During the fall we get a late flush of roses and one of the most fragrant of my 120+ varieties is a red/pink hybrid tea rose called ‘Beverly’. Employee Highlight:
Joshua Worth

The University Budget Office is pleased to introduce our newest Senior Budget Analyst, Joshua Worth. Joshua is no stranger to Finance and Administration, having joined our team from Accounts Receivable in May. Joshua will be assisting with building reports, analyzing data, streamlining campus user processes, support end user initiatives, and assisting in overall budget monitoring and preparation.

Originally from Hazlehurst, Joshua graduated from Troy University with a Master of Accountancy. Ever the avid musician, Joshua enjoys playing the saxophone and piano and collects other musical instruments. His other passion - his garden, is currently abundant with tomatoes and peppers! Joshua lives in Athens with his wife Elana and his two sons, Nolan and Hudson. Elana is working on her PhD in Science Education and this is what brought the Worths to Athens.

Please join us in welcoming Joshua to the University Budget Office family!

We need your help!

The Finance Division will be introducing a new Splash Page in October, and we need name suggestions.

What’s a Splash Page? It’s a webpage we will use internally to provide links to the most common items accessed across all Finance Division Offices. It will be set as the default homepage and be a tool both for current employees and those new to the Finance family.

We are looking for a name that will incorporate our newspaper design, encompass our diversity as well as reflect the mission of Finance Division. Please send your ideas to Beth Martin at bamartin@uga.edu by 5pm on August 26th. The top three names chosen will receive a $5 Jittery Joes gift certificate. Look for a chance to vote on your favorite in the next newsletter!

OneSource Project Timeline

Finance & Administration just wrapped up the four-year OneSource project at the University of Georgia. The project, whose aim was to transform the business processes at UGA, was a massive undertaking and required a great deal of hard work and cooperation from teams all over campus.

“Many details and tasks are required to work through a project of this size and scope,” said Ryan Nesbit, Vice President of Finance & Administration, at a recent OneSource event recognizing our accomplishments. “You also know that a few individuals cannot do this alone… it requires a team,” Nesbit said.

The OneSource project required collaboration and coordination of more than 1,000 partners; from central administration, to every school, college, unit and division on campus. In all, every employee at UGA has been impacted, as OneSource now handles time sheets, leave request, travel and expense reports and paychecks.

Despite the enormity of the project, Finance & Administration has done a tremendous job of implementing the OneSource system, according to University of Georgia President Jere W. Morehead.

“‘We had heard horror stories from other institutions that had gone through this process before we started it in 2016,” Morehead said. “Because of your hard work and dedication, the University of Georgia has integrated, streamlined, and enhanced our business processes; we have improved our data collection and reporting capabilities; we have enhanced our data privacy and security; and we have standardized and aligned our business processes with those of the University System.
